ABSTRACT

A method includes, when a packet is to be sent over a secured connection, determining if the secured connection is set up. The method also includes, when the secured connection is not set up, storing the packet and, after storing the packet, when the secure connection is set up, retrieving the packet and transmitting the packet over the secured connection.